disdrometers:
a bibliometric review” by M. Fernandez-Raga et al.

Anonymous Referee #3

Received and published: 5 October 2011

This manuscript is not a scientific review of the research with disdrometers. It does not present the reasearch and advances that have been done until now on this subject, nor describes possible future directions of development. It is also missing to make reference of advances that have been done like the 2D video disdrometer. The information of how many papers on the subject have been published and which author has published more papers(and these publications are not even included in the references) is of no scientific use and, thus, it does not worth publication in AMT journal.
